AND THE NEW DEAL
RIDE TO VICTORYIs Greatest Political Landslide
Ever Recorded In American Election

NOT YET COMPLETE

Gov. Landon Appears To Have Carried Maine, Vermont, New HampshireBy George R. Holmes
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
NEW YORK, Nov. 4—(INS)—President Roosevelt and the New Deal rode triumphantly to victory today on the crest of the greatest political landslide ever recorded in an American election.It was as if some gigantic broom, wielded by some 25,000,000 or more
voters, had swept the country clean, and given a mandate to Mr. Roosevelt such as no President before him has ever had.And it was almost a clean sweep.
Early today, with returns still not completed from various states, it appeared that Gov. Alfred M. Landon carried only three states—Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire—with his own Kansas still somewhat in doubt but leaning strong to Mr. Roosevelt.
All else was engulfed in a landslide
that had the Democrats themselves starry-eyed in amazement.Should this be the final line-up with only Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont going Republican, President Roosevelt would have an Electoral College vote of 519 to Gov. Landon's
12. That breaks a record of 116 years standing. His popular majority will exceed the 7,000,000 of four years ago.
That is an all-time record.Moreover, both Houses of Congress
not only remain Democratic, but actually their already top-heavy Democratic majorities may be actually increased in both Senate and House.
The exact line-up in the new 75th Congress may not be determined for several days, but the New Deal is assured of being even more firmly planted in the saddle than before.The broad sweep of Mr. Roosevelt's victory also has carried with it continued control of most of the state governments through election of Democratic Governors, although there may be some exceptions.Bowing to the inevitable, Gov. Landon, who fought a gallant, uphill struggle, conceded Mr. Roosevelt's election this morning and sent the President this telegram:"The nation has spoken. Every American will accept the verdict and work for the common cause for the good of our country. That is the spirit of democracy. You have my sincere congratulations."To this, Mr. Roosevelt replied:
"I am grateful to you for your generous telegram and I am confident that all of us Americans will now pull together for the common good. I send you every good wish."To these amenities, James A. Farley, the Democratic campaign manager
added a plea for forgetfulness of all the campaign's bitterness and recrimi-nation. "Big Jim" has some bitterness of his own at some of the things that were said of him, but in the sweet flush of victory today he was inclined to follow his own advice and "forget it."The tidal sweep of the New Deal moved over all obstacles, whether Jeffersonian Democrats or the Lemke-Coughlin combination's third (Union)
party threat. In no place did the Union party vote figure importantly, despite the hectic campaigning of Congressman Lemke, and the bombastic assaults of Father Coughlin.By William K. Hutchinson

Pennsylvania's 36 electoral votes were irrefutably written into the Democratic column today for the first time in 80 years as nearly complete returns gave the Keystone State to President Franklin D. Roosevelt by a majority of more than 600,000 votes.In Pennsylvania, as it appeared in every other state but three, Gov. Alfred M. Landon's candidacy was rejected with an emphasis that could not be denied.This once rock-ribbed Republican Commonwealth not only placed its stamp of approval on continuation of the present administration's policies in the White House, but carried the decision further by:Giving 26 Democratic Congressional candidates leads that appeared to assure their sitting in the 75th session of the national House of Representatives. Eight Republicans were indicated as elected where formerly they held 11 posts.Decisively placing a Democratic state treasurer and auditor general in the "watch dog" offices now held by two Republicans.Giving the State Democratic Administration control of the State Senate
as well as the House of Representatives it has dominated since 1934.With only 936 precincts of the state's 3012 yet to report, the vote was 2,129,463 for Roosevelt, 1,518,278 for Landon—a lead of 611,185 for the chief executive.The landslide swept both Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, smashing for the first time in Republican history the

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 4.—Bucks county's corn crop this fall, according to County Agent William F.
Greenawalt, Doylestown, is much better than had been expected by a large number of the farmers several months ago. During the latter part of July and the fore part of August, farmers were of the opinion that the corn yield this fall would be very short because of the small amount of rain.Commenting on the corn crop early this week, Mr. Greenawalt stated that the yield in general had been good in all parts of the county. The ears are well formed and there is a very small amount of smut. The dry weather several months ago, however, has caused the fodder to be rather short. Weather for the cutting and husking of the corn has been excellent, said Mr.
Greenawalt.Most of the farmers in the county have completed the fall seeding, and the weather for this work has also been ideal. Wheat sown early appears to be good. Many of the farmers are sowing winter barley to take the place of oats. Farmers find that the winter barley has a greater feeding value per acre than oats. Sowing of the winter barley this fall means that many farmers will not have to sow their oats in the spring.Mr. Greenawalt also stated that the heavy frost last week had put an end
to vegetable growth in the gardens.
Celery and endive were badly damaged
as were also the tomatoes. The freeze last week also hurt the pastures because the feeding value of the grasses
has been lowered to a great extent.It has been learned also that there is a shortage of water in some places, particularly in the section running eastward from Quakertown to Ferndale. Farms in that section missed almost all of the rains during the past few weeks.

OTHER COURT CASES

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 4—From the school which gave him a free education, James DiBiase, 1403 Cumberland street, Philadelphia, stole musical band instruments valued at $1075, and was sentenced on Monday afternoon by Judge Calvin S. Boyer to pay the costs of prosecution and serve not less than six months nor more than six years in the County Prison.When he was 15 years old, the defendant, now a 21-year-old husband, was a student at St. Francis Industrial School at Eddington. Making two visits to his alma mater—always in dead of night—the former student stole on the first trip two band instruments, valued at $255, and on the second criminal escapade stole twelve more valued at $820.Pleading guilty to burglary, felonious entry, larceny and receiving stolen goods, the well-built dark-haired young man told the Court how in the dead of night he took the hinges off a door in order to get into the band room. He denied that he was armed, although he knew that the building was used as a dormitory and inhabited by a hundred or more boys
as well as preceptors.He confessed to County Detective Russo, who investigated the theft, that he pawned four of the instruments for which he received $10 apiece. "I was unemployed all summer and I owed rent, doctors' and furniture bills; you know how it is when you're married."DiBiase committed the first theft August 28, and the second October 24,
which in the eyes of the Court made his case astonishingly cold-blooded."The worst phase of your crime is that you committed two offenses. Instead of repenting, you went back and repeated your crime, making it more serious and despicable. Imagine stealing from the school which gave you a free education," said Judge Boyer.The defendant, who has been married six years, has been separated from his wife and baby for seven months. He left school six years ago.

election. The ages are 92, 88 and 84
years.In Bristol Township, at the polling place at Newportville, W. Harry King, Bath Road, cast his ballot yesterday morning at about 11 o'clock. Mr. King recalls casting his first vote for Abraham Lincoln, placing it in a ballot box in the same village. Mr. King states that for the greater portion of his lifetime, with the exception of a short period when he resided in Bris-

visits on election day to the polling place in Newportville.Mrs. Mary Cooper, 519 Bath street, had ballot No. 14 when she went to the third ward polling place on Bath street
before eight o'clock yesterday morning."I've voted ever since women had the right of franchise," she proudly stated.
Mrs. Cooper takes a keen interest in affairs of the day, and frequently listens to political speeches over the radio as she crochets. She planned to sit up late last night to learn of the results.Mrs. Martha Jane Woolman, 314 Ot-

ELECTION BULLETINS

Roosevelt's Lead 600,000 In State
By International News ServicePresident Roosevelt's lead over Governor Alfred M. Landon held steadily around the 600,000 mark in Pennsylvania today, as returns continued to pile up. With Philadelphia and Allegheny Counties completed, 7174 precincts in the State gave Roosevelt, 2,129,170; Landon, 1,536,994.

Democrats Capture Offices

Philadelphia, Nov. 4—Riding the Roosevelt victory, the Democratic candidates for the Commonwealth's two offices today were leading the Republican rivals by better than 300,000 votes. The offices of State Treasurer and Auditor General, held by Republicans for the past 30 years, are last in office on Capitol Hill, held by the GOP.Tabulations of returns from 6021 of the state's 3022 precincts gave S.
Claire Ross of Butler, 1,698,374 votes against 1,286,596 for Frank L. Pinola, of Pittston, in their fight for State Treasurer.In the battle for Auditor General, returns from the same precincts showed State Senator Warren R. Roberts polling 1,687,364 votes with 1,301,445 votes going to his Republican opponent, E. Arthur Sweeney, Greensburg publisher.
Ross, a deputy attorney, is 41, married, and has two daughters. He has been active in the Earle administration and during the World War he was in the United States Army Air Service.Senator Roberts is 62, married, and lives in Bethlehem, where he obtained his first job as a messenger boy for the Lehigh Valley Railroad. He was elected State Senator in 1926 and re-elected in 1930 and 1934.

27 Democrats in Congress

Harrisburg, Nov. 4—A Congressional delegation of 27 Democrats, largest number in the Commonwealth's history and 7 Republicans, appeared likely for Pennsylvania today.And the line-up may be 28 to 6, for in the 20th district, comprising Clarion, Elk, Forest, Mercer, Venango and Warren Counties, Congressman Dennis J. Driscoll, Democrat, was overtaking his Republican rival, Benjamin Jarrett, who was leading by a few hundred votes. The last delegation to the lower chamber consisted of 23 Democrats and 11 Republicans.

New Hampshire Democratic

Concord, N. H., Nov. 4—New Hampshire today stood in the national Democratic column for the first time since 1916.With the Granite State vote complete except one ward in Dover, and the town of Claremont, usually a Democratic community, the vote for President was: Roosevelt, 102,714; Landon, 100,859.
This gave the President of 4 electoral votes.

MEN MADE TO WORK

While full information is not available, and possibly will not be for months, the forced-work laws recently promulgated in Bolivia and Paraguay sounds suspiciously like a move to revive peonage in its worst forms.

Paraguay is a tropical country with a large population of primitive Indians who live by hunting and casual agriculture and are not accustomed to formal labor. It is not quite the same in Bolivia, most of which lies on the high and bitterly bleak Andean plateau. There conditions of life are extremely rigorous and those who will not "work," in the sense at least of cultivating a bit of barley and potatoes, must starve. However, Bolivia also has tropical valleys on the eastern slope of the mountains which support an indigenous primitive population much like Paraguay's. Bolivia also has mines, which doubtless need labor for their working.

Dispatches from both countries describe the laws or decrees in question as requiring that every able-bodied male citizen have a job. It is explained that both countries suffer from labor shortage and at the same time have large numbers of men who "will not work."

Where are the jobs to be provided for these men who are to be made to find jobs? What are they to be paid? Who will transport them to the jobs, and will they be free to leave if work becomes available elsewhere?

These are questions the world will want to have answered. Legal compulsion presumably is one way of inducing primitive populations to take their place in the fabric of so-called civilized society. But we should like to see the above questions answered before we become very happy about it.

CHOCOLATE IN WAR

The conscience fund of the U. S. Treasury is richer by $2, the contribution of an unidentified veteran who helped himself to some chocolate bars from a truck in France during the war.

We have long pondered the connection between the chocolate bar and the military life. That the connection is real can not be doubted by any one who remarked the extraordinary lengths to which the soldiers would go to obtain this confection in France. Even the French brands were not scorned, though they seemed to be adulterated with an inferior quality of gravel and the flavor was only vaguely that of chocolate. Indeed, they were greatly esteemed, when American types were unavailable.

In Germany a chocolate bar has lately been produced of coal tar derivatives, which we can only regard as one more evidence that the Reich is grinding for war. In fact, a world survey of the chocolate bar output, and stores now laid in in military caches, would, we think, give the closest possible line on what nations are best prepared for the struggle which so many observers profess to see ahead.

The old-fashioned quarterback who barked signals is back in the foot ball picture, and it is only a short step now to pet bulldogs, calash pipes and the chrysanthemum haircut.

"Sweepstakes on Love"

by MAY CHRISTIE

SYNOPSIS

The socially elite Diana Darlington and Regina Hyde are rivals for the love of Roger Dexter, eligible young bachelor. Although Diana enjoys a much higher social position than Regina, the latter's wealth seems to more than balance the scales. Diana wants to work but her mother, Genevieve, will not hear of it. Mrs. Darlington secretly makes a living by sending her friends to different modistes, beauty salons, etc. Her one hope is for Diana to marry wealth as soon as possible. So, she arranges for her daughter's debut in a suite at the Parkview Hotel, furnished "free" by the management for the publicity to be gained via the "best people" who would attend the party. Even the champagne is gratis, donated by the very "common" Alfred Flegenschultz, former bootlegger but now a leading liquor merchant. In return, Genevieve is forced to invite the social climbing Flegenschultz family. Roger showers Diana with attention and everything goes smoothly until the champagne runs out and the spiteful Regina suggests that the party go to her house for further libations. Roger was among the last to leave. He did not accept Regina's invitation, however, as Diana feared but, indignant with his friends for clearing out so summarily, went to the Harvard Club instead.

CHAPTER VII

A gossip columnist in a daily paper joked about the drinks having run dry at a "well-known and beautiful party."

That the donation of the champagne had proved the open sesame to an erstwhile notorious bootlegger and his spouse and daughter who were "secretly Vere de Vere in lineage" was also hinted.

Diana's cheeks burned as she read the item. Indeed, she could not fail to miss it, since later that day the mail was to bring three anonymous inked clippings to her.

"How my dear friends rejoice!" she thought bitterly, tearing the items into little pieces and flinging them into the fire, so that Genevieve might not see them.

What was the good of it all, when everyone in the town knew they were as poor as church mice? Why should one stoop to people like the Flegenschultzes for what one could get out of them? One paid in the long run, as was right that one should. It was an inevitable law.

Regina's coming-out ball at the Ritz-Carlton was three weeks hence. Meantime, there was the play that was to be given in a little Park Avenue theatre for charity.

Rehearsing her two songs and three dances kept Diana busy.

It brought her within radius of Roger, too.

For Roger was designing the scenery and sets for the four acts, and was up at the theatre almost every day now.

After a late rehearsal one night, he took Diana to supper.

Their names appeared in a well-known gossip column two days later, Diana being referred to as Roger's newest "heart."

Genevieve was delighted, Diana tremulous and embarrassed, half hoping Roger might say something, though she thought the announcement was in bad taste.

Roger said nothing. It seemed to her that he avoided her thereafter. She was hurt and disappointed.

Not long after, the same columnist mentioned Roger as escorting "a highly-sponduliced pelt and hide heiress" to a party in Hot Springs.

"So she's followed him there. Or he asked her to go. She'll be with him at the polo matches, too. It looks awfully pointed. It must mean something," thought Diana miserably.

She had half a mind to withdraw from the cast of the show—only that would be awfully ungrateful, especially as it was being given for charity.

Her first entrance—a solo song and dance—was towards the end of the first act.

The setting was the veranda of a log cabin in the mountains where a week-end party was gathered together, and Diana—although it was supposed to be winter—was to stroll out in the moonlight—the scene was specially shifted for her, so she would have the width of the stage to dance in—and snow was to drift down on her as she sang and danced.

The trees brought specially from the South for Regina's ball were to be used in this scene. Trick birds that warbled realistically were to be fastened in the branches, to form a sort of under trilling for Diana's voice.

Such was Regina's idea. Regina had insisted on buying these wretched mechanical birds.

"To get a laugh on me and make a fool of me!" Diana thought for the first moment, and then been ashamed of her thought.

It went well at rehearsal. It sounded like the real thing. It was a beautiful scene.

Barrels of salt were to be scattered at each side of the stage, among the trees, in place of snow, and scraps of white paper were to flutter down on her towards the end of her dance, just as though it were snowing.

She was to wear a smart, short costume, all in white, and long white gaiters and a little white cap of caracul.

Diana could dance like a bit of thisledown, and warble as sweetly as a linnet.

Roger had painted a beautiful drop-scene that looked like the High Alps.

Regina had wanted him to be her leading man, and had pleaded with him, but he was adamant.

"I can't be scene painter, and stage manager, and actor, too. Have a heart, woman!"

Second-best choice was the Rensselaer boy. He was handsome, blue-blooded, but lacked pep. Especially in the love scenes.

They gave her all the space, and hardly any to Regina, who was the leading lady of the show.

Regina had a fertile brain. If she couldn't win by fair means, there were other methods. . . .

In her opening scene where she performed solo, Diana made entry down a wooden staircase leading from the log cabin to the moonlit stage.

Hands over her head, she drifted down the steps that were lightly dotted with paper snow.

On the fifth night of the play, everything seemed as usual. There was nothing to indicate that the white flakes on the last four steps were other than innocuous scraps of paper. . . .

With the birds twittering in the trees, and the piccolo and oboe in the orchestra trilling accompaniment.

He gathered the limp form of the girl in his arms, hurrying her through the wings into her dressing room.

Maddening how Roger rehearsed them, over and over. Now if it had been Roger instead, with all that kissing!

"It isn't much of a part, Diana's is as good as mine—almost more so," Regina had grumbled.

"But you can't warble like Diana nor can you swing a wicked leg like hers—although you're a divine creature and I worship you!" Clarence had declared.

"Shut up, you fool, and rehearse your own lines! You're well east!" You were born to be a butler!

"Milady's slave and serf!" Clarence was unshakable.

Opening night came. Everything went smoothly. The little theatre was packed with an ultra-smart audience.

Diana's song and dance scene in the snow brought down the house in a roar of applause. At the last minute, on the principle of do-or-die, and stirred with a new ambition, she had inserted a spectacular bit of dancing into her piece. It was a riot.

"She ought to be in the Follies!" "She ought to be in the movies!" "She's as graceful as Paofova!" They cheered and applauded.

At the end of the first act, when everyone who had appeared had taken their bow, the calls were for Diana. . . .

Four times she went out. Roger fairly had to push her from the wings, so modest she was.

Regina was insanely jealous. Fool that she had been, to permit the child such a strong part in her show!

Under sweet smiles she hid her annoyance.

Diana had a song and dance in the third and fourth acts, each time with a partner. Perhaps that could be altered?

But her performance again earned her similar applause, so that the numbers had to be repeated.

There were critics from the newspapers at the opening night. They "hammered" the little play, but two of them gave high praise to Diana.

That was gall to Regina. She read the notices, then tore them into little pieces. For a mad moment she thought of buying up the whole day's editions, had that been possible!

Declaring that Diana had a cold, and looked utterly fagged out, and must have an understudy, Regina spent hours daily learning her songs and dances.

But Diana stuck to her guns. She saw through Regina.

Regina could not out her. Each night, Diana and her performance won rounds of applause.

Reporters came to interview her.

They gave her all the space, and hardly any to Regina, who was the leading lady of the show.

Regina had a fertile brain. If she couldn't win by fair means, there were other methods. . . .

TO MAKE FIRST HUNTING DAY SPORTSMAN'S DAY

NEWPORTVILLE, Nov. 4.—The game protectors organization of Bucks County and the sportsmen's organizations have combined efforts towards making this year's first day of hunting a real sportsman's day, and not one filled with mishaps and unfair practices. They have asked the co-operation of all fire companies in the county to officially open "Small Game" season on November 6th at nine a. m. by sounding their fire sirens or bells. No woodcock hunters are entitled to shoot that morning at sunrise as the season is closed between sunrise and 9 a. m. for all hunters.

This gives all sportsmen an equal chance and lessens the dangers of the "first day."

The official season for small game is open until Nov. 26, Thanksgiving Day. Game warden Daniel Potter requests all to comply with this ruling.

Pres't Roosevelt And The New Deal Ride To Victory

today, the new Senate apparently will line up January 3:

74 Democrats; 18 Republicans; 2 Farmer-Laborites; 1 Progressive, and 1 Independent.

Two years ago, after another precedent-shattering Democratic victory, it lined up:

69 Democrats; 25 Republicans; 1 Farmer-Laborite, and 1 Progressive.

The Republicans appeared to have won only seven out of thirty-seven Senatorial contests in yesterday's national election. The Democrats took 27 contests on returns to date, with one Independent winning, while two Farmer-Laborites shared the long and short terms for the same seat.

Five Republican stalwarts were swept into the discard in the Roosevelt landslide. They were Hastings in Delaware, Dickinson in Iowa, Barbour in New Jersey, Metcalf in Rhode Island and Carey in Wyoming.

Three young Republicans appeared to have won seats. They were young Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., in Massachusetts, young Governor H. Styles Bridges in New Hampshire and the newcomer, Chandler Gurney, in South Dakota.

ruled from the eastern metropolis. Philadelphia, almost unbelievably, gave President Roosevelt a plurality of 199,712, while Allegheny County stepped up its 1932 plurality of 37,500 to an as yet incomplete 180,164.

Pennsylvania last gave its electoral votes to a Democratic Presidential candidate in 1856. And then it was supporting James Buchanan, a native son.

Although odd scattered thousands of the state's votes was yet to come in from rural districts, it appeared that only a mere handful of the 67 counties had "gone for Landon." The Democratic achievement in this respect was the more impressive in view of the President's winning of only 26 counties in the 1932 election. In that year President Herbert Hoover, losing the nation, carried Pennsylvania by 157,592 votes.

Decisive majorities also carried Sen. Warren R. Roberts, Bethlehem, into the office of State Auditor General and his Democratic colleague, F. Clair Ross, Butler, into the State Treasurer's post. The decision in this contest completed the Earle administration's band of governmental control.

Hot congressional fights throughout the State were topped by those in the 11th and 20th Districts. Rep. Patrick J. Boland, Scranton Democrat and whip in the lower national House, won easily over John J. Owens, his Republican opponent. In the 20th district, however, Rep. Dennis J. Driscoll, St. Marys, was running a close race in the tabulation of votes against former Congressman Benjamin Jarrett, of Farrell, Republican.

Honor Society Elects Several New Members

The Honor Society on June 3rd. The pupils who were elected at that time were: Chester Badr, Harry Bauroth, Betty Beswick, Bernice Bruner, George Brown, Peter Peters and Charlotte Rathke.

The two main duties of the Honor Society are: to take care of the honor point system, which consists of arranging honor points for scholastic ability, athletics and other extra-curricular activities. Cards are kept on file for every pupil in the senior high school. When a pupil has received the required number of points he is presented with the honor point emblem.

The second duty of the Honor Society is to determine, for each six weeks' period, who are eligible to be on the Honor Roll. In order to be eligible a pupil must have two A's and all the rest B's in major subjects.

The pupils on the honor roll for the first six weeks' period are: Senior, Harry Bauroth; Juniors, Catherine Quinn and Doris Mershon; sophomores, Louisa Pittsonka, Robert Townsend, Charles Schreyer, Margaret Johnson, and Doris Kerr; freshmen, Hope Kwozicka, Bernadine Coyle, Anna Warwick, Sara Ellis, Jane Lynch, Elizabeth Millaway, Betty Shields, and Frances Tracy.

Must Serve Jail Term For Robbing School

Mrs. Adaline DiBiase, Lafayette street, Bristol, 20-year-old wife of the defendant, girlish and attractive, testified they separated simply because they couldn't get along any more.

"Were you tired of each other?" queried the Court.

"No, I have never been tired of him," said Mrs. DiBiase wistfully.

Character witnesses included former landlords, Isaac Marks, Goldie and Maurice Binder, 1403 Cumberland street, Phila., all of whom testified the young man bore an excellent reputation.

"He looked for work and even pushed a push-cart around on the street selling anything in order to make an honest dollar," said Mrs. Binder.

Pleading guilty to obtaining money under false pretense, Leslie O. Solly, of Ardmore, was given a suspended sentence by Judge Boyer on condition that he make restitution to W. Robert Stockham, of the Morrisville Herald, on a shortage of $54.

"Your crime of stealing from an employer is particularly despicable. The Court will place you on probation for one year and suspend sentence on condition that you repay the money as rapidly as you can. The fact that your wife was ill was no excuse."

Raymond Clark, 43-year-old Negro of Lambertville, N. J., pleaded guilty to drunken driving October 24, when he was arrested by Chief of Police James P. Welsh, was sentenced by Judge Boyer to pay the costs of prosecution and serve not less than two months nor more than two years in the County Prison.

When the Court learned that he had served six months on a previous larceny charge, of which he said nothing at the time he was sentenced on his second offense, John Krajian, 25-year-old Haycock township, was refused a parole until Judge Boyer examines the record.

Krajian was convicted of stealing a pair of shoes and jug of vinegar from a Richland township resident and has served two months of his sentence. He was arrested August 29.

When sentence was pronounced in September, Krajian told the Court nothing of having been in prison for a similar charge and having served six months, which is regarded as a serious breach of faith on the part of the Court.

Application for a parole in the case of Charles Walker, Philadelphia, father of seven children, was ordered continued until next Monday by President Judge Hiram H. Keller. The defendant pleaded guilty to drunken driving and was sentenced September 21st.

Pleading guilty to drunken driving, Arthur Fox, Doylestown, who was arrested by Corporal Chester W. Rietz, of the State Highway Patrol, was sentenced by Judge Keller to pay the costs of prosecution and serve not less than thirty days nor more than two years in the County Prison.

STRAIGHT
TICKET

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY OFFERS to bring to an end an Administration, honey-combed with Communism, with restraint on free enterprise, with promotion of class hatred, and regimentation of lives and business, with its horde of expensive commissions and bureaus, its huge increase in Federal personnel, its reckless and indefensible spending of public funds, with enormous increase in both direct and hidden taxes, coupled with the burden of our national debt to double the amount it had reached at the end of the first World War?

The Republican Party, through the functioning of a free uncontrolled convention, offers to the people, Wendell Willkie, a business executive, with a clean record, who has never exploited the public, who has shown sympathy and understanding for the common man, the type of man who will run the business of the Government sensibly and economically.

WHY YOU SHOULD VOTE THE REPUBLICAN TICKET

1. THE FIFTH COLUMN AND THE NEW DEAL

President Roosevelt has appointed to public office, and otherwise sponsored many persons of avowed Socialistic or Communistic proclivities.

The Dies Committee recently made public a list of 563 Government employees who were members of a Communist "front" organization. President Roosevelt called the publication of this list a "sordid procedure."

Willkie has publicly declared that, if he is elected, the first thing he will do will be to clean out the Fifth Columnites now employed by the New Deal Government at Washington.

2. POLITICS IN RELIEF

Recent disclosures prove conclusively that there has been widespread political corruption and coercion of relief workers in the administration of the W. P. A. The Senate Committee to investigate campaign expenditures and the use of government funds in election campaigns, under the chairmanship of Senator Shepard (a Democrat), reported "The Committee believes that funds appropriated by the Congress for the relief of those in need and distress have been in many instances diverted from these high purposes to political ends. . . . the evidence disclosed that Democratic County Officials and Democratic local party workers did bring pressure to bear upon W. P. A. officials regarding appointments and dismissals of W. P. A. personnel. . . . it is certain that organized efforts have been, and are being made to control the vote of those on relief work."

Yet in a speech at Covington, Kentucky, on July 8, 1938, President Roosevelt, in referring to the charges that employees of the Federal Government and workers on relief were being directed how to vote, said, "Personally, I am not greatly disturbed by these stories."

3. RE-EMPLOYMENT

Despite the expenditure of more than 56 billion dollars in 7 years, and of more than 21 billion dollars for relief and recovery, the number of gainfully employed workers in the United States was more than two and a half million less in 1939 than in 1929. There are today more than 10 million persons unemployed, —about the same number as when Roosevelt was elected in 1932.

4. THIRD TERM

The no-third-term-for-any-President is not a "moss-back tradition." At least 34 American states have express statutory limitations on official tenure.

The no-third-term-for-any-President tradition is part of the armor of freedom; it is a restraint on the abuse of executive power.

The idea of "indispensable" man is repugnant to Americans, in a country so rich with outstanding men of exceptional ability, high patriotism, and especially devoted to the American type of representative government, as contrasted with the philosophy of centralized government with more and more power centered in Washington, and especially in one man.

5. DESPOILING CIVIL SERVICE

In 1932, under President Hoover, 80.1 per cent of the employees of the Federal Government were under Civil Service, while on June 30, 1939 only 67.7 per cent were under Civil Service. The total number of employees of the Federal Government increased from 583,000 to 920,310 or 57.8 per cent during the period 1933-1939. The number of employees not under Civil Service increased from 116,000 to 297,478 or by more than 156 per cent, selected primarily on the basis of political considerations.

6. GOVERNMENT SPENDING

Government spending—which must be paid in taxes, has increased 45 per cent in the last ten years. In the last ten years, the number of Federal employees has almost doubled—of every six employed, one is on the Government payroll. In 1932, the National Government postage bill was 9 million dollars. Now it is 36 million dollars, and so it goes all along the Government Front. In the last

7. ON THE ROAD TO BANKRUPTCY

In 1929, the National debt was 17 billion dollars. By the end of 1940, the New Deal will have increased the National debt to 65 billion dollars. The New Deal has wasted billions and billions of dollars and now we are unprepared in our greatest National emergency.

8. DISCRIMINATION AGAINST BUSINESS

President Roosevelt has threatened and seems ready to take over business and industry, but he does not know how to run them and he can't get them operated on New Deal theories with executives who have been robbed of initiative and incentive. The New Deal has frightened capital and business into hiding, and threats of expropriation, nationalization and jail sentences are not effective means of getting production in a country accustomed to individual initiative.

9. NATIONAL DEFENSE

From March, 1933 to June, 1940, Congress has voted to President Roosevelt, more than 18 billion dollars to be expended at his own discretion, but out of these funds the President has spent for defense purposes only 636 million dollars, and our defenses are woefully inadequate.

10. THREATENED DICTATORSHIP

Most patent of the reasons for the voters to repudiate the New Deal is the convincing proof of the threat of establishing a dictatorship by the New Deal attempt to gag the press, the control of radio broadcasting, and the packing of the Supreme Court. If given a third term the President would almost certainly have the opportunity of making further appointees to the Supreme Court, who would be completely subservient to his will.

The New Deal has sponsored and is responsible for a huge national debt; destroying morale of industry; fostering class conflicts; planned economy; an unbalanced budget; imposing confiscatory taxes, and government by decree. All these things happened in Germany, Italy and France, now under the control of Dictators.
